State ticket, provided it was offered to him.

Before Justice Gaynor went into the court-room this morning he told some newspaper men that he was not anxious to be nominated for Governor, and he hardly knew what he would do if the nomination came to him. He said he had been elected by his constituents to the Supreme Court Bench for a term of fourteen years, and as he had just begun his duties, he did not know why he should not fuifil them, and remain on the Bench.

Justice Gaynor was inclined to be non-committal when asked the direct question whether he would accept the nomination for Governor.

Tom S. Whitehouse, of Brooklyn, declares the story was started by Shepard people here for the purpose of injuring Mr. Gaynor and making him and his friends uncomfortable. On the other hand Thomas Pearsall, who was the nominee of the regular Democracy against Judge Gaynor last Fall, is a strong advocate of Judge Gaynor's nomination for Governor.

But Mr. Pearsall is said to have a selfish purpose. He wants to succeed Gaynor as Judge.

"Lhave lots of friends who can also testify to its great merits, and this is the only remedy that I is great merits, and this is the only remedy that I is the most wonderful of all medicines."

If therefore behoves all who are not feeling well, or who are run down in health, in fact, all who are out of order in any way, to use this great medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and once. It will make you well and strong.

It is not a patent medicine, but the discovery and prescription of the well-known Dr. Greene, of 35 West-14th Street, New York City, the most successful specialist in cur no nervous and chronic that of the public finds in paying the hallowed precincts where betting the subject of the privilege of entering the hallowed precincts where betting the hallowed precincts fing the hallowed precincts where betting the hallowed precincts from the mussement which the public finds in paying the betty find the privilege of entering the hallowed precincts from the mussement which the public finds in paying the betting the string the strength of the privilege of entering the hallowed precin ing a half interest in the Belle Meade Stud, and in his investments in other directions on the turf, have been with the idea of becoming prominent as a turfite. Now, will probably arise the opportunity for him to prove a veritable Moses to lead his confreres through the wilderness which frowns before them. Arrayed against these is the class which objects to betting on moral grounds, and who, unfortunately, are incapable of that nice distinction which readily perceives that betting in a ring in which are permitted only the bookmakers who will pay royal tribute to the men whose mission, under their charters, is to improve thoroughbred horseffesh, and the people who are prepared to pay at the gate for the opportunity to back their opinions with their money. To these, who, perhaps, lack the experience necessary to perceive this nicety of adjustment in the eclipsing shadow of their estimate of the revenue to the aforesald magnates, the amendment will probably commend itself.

Again another class is to be considered, strange bedfellows, probably, for the high-minded latter sect, but still in harmony with them and their purpose, although actuated by vasity different metives. These are the men who, led by Peter De Lacy, assert that there is a actual difference between the conduct of pool-selling in offices rented for that purpose and the same transaction in little coops, the revenue from which goes into the trastury of the magnates.

The matter of testing the Ives Pool has long been a subject of interest to the last-named class, and the amendment will impress them as entirely oblicerating the (to the) obnoxious law. But then they may not care about day the same and the amendment will impress them as entirely oblicerating the coops, the revenue from which goes into the trastury of the magnates.

will impress them as entirely oblicerating the (to the) obnoxious law. But then they may not care about doing the Samson act and perishing in the ruins of their enemies' overthrow. Altogether, a vots on the amendment is likely to prove interesting all around.
